

Table of Contents

Introduction	1
1 Marketing, sustainability, and value creation	3
1.1 Introduction	3
1.2 Value-management approach to marketing: Analysis, strategy, and tactics	4
1.2.1 Strategy	6
1.2.2 Tactics	7
1.3 From value-management marketing to eco-systemic marketing	9
1.4 Marketing, value creation, and business development	11
1.4.1 The net marketing contribution	19
1.5 Developing market demand	23
1.5.1 Estimation of potential market demand	24
1.5.2 Demand development opportunities	31
1.6 Increasing market share	38
1.6.1 Market share analysis	40
1.6.2 Market share analysis: A practical illustration	49
1.7 Improving profitability	52
1.7.1 Price sensitivity thresholds: The degree of maneuver	54
1.8 Expanding the brand portfolio	56
1.8.1 Benefits and risks of brand extension strategies	58
1.8.2 Managing brand extension strategies	60
1.9 Purpose and sustainable development	63
1.9.1 Responsible marketing	64
1.9.2 Purpose and abstraction	66
1.9.3 Identification of purpose	69
1.10 Customer centricity and customer-centric digital marketing	74
Appendix A	79
A.1 Developing the market development index	79
A.2 Increasing the share development index	82
A.3 Improving profitability	87

2	The value for the customer	91
2.1	Introduction	91
2.2	Value for the customer: Definition, relevance, and articulation	93
2.2.1	Definition of value for the customer	93
2.2.2	Strategic relevance of value for the customer	99
2.2.3	Articulation of value for the customer: The role of psychological involvement	103
2.3	The economic advantage for the customer	106
2.4	The composition approach: Multi-attribute models	112
2.4.1	Qualitative research techniques: Individual interviews, focus groups, and observational methods	114
2.4.2	Rating scales	117
2.4.3	Some basic processing	119
2.4.4	The decision rules in consumer choice	123
2.4.5	The three-factor theory	126
2.5	The decomposition approach: Conjoint analysis	130
2.5.1	Conjoint analysis: An application in consumer markets	134
2.5.2	Conjoint analysis: An application in business-to-business markets	143
2.6	The hybrid approach	148
2.7	Perceived value, choices, and context effects	152
2.7.1	Prospect theory	153
2.7.2	Context effects	156
	Appendix B	161
B.1	The economic advantage for the customer	161
B.2	Multi-attribute models	163
B.3	The decision rules	166
B.4	The conjoint analysis	170
3	Customer centricity	175
3.1	Introduction	175
3.2	A synthesis model	177
3.3	External gaps	183
3.3.1	The comprehension gap	183
3.3.2	The perception gap	193
3.4	Internal gaps	202
3.4.1	The alignment and involvement gaps	203
3.4.2	Design and implementation gaps	212
3.5	The synthesis: Measuring customer satisfaction gaps	218
	Appendix C	226
C.1	Measurement of customer satisfaction gaps	226
C.2	Analysis of cognitive structures	229
C.3	Cross-impact analysis	232

4	Customer relations	235
4.1	Introduction	235
4.2	The benefits of loyalty	238
4.3	The value of loyalty	242
4.3.1	Customer lifetime value	243
4.3.2	The retention rate and the duration of customer relationships	245
4.3.3	Customer equity	249
4.4	The evolutionary cycle of customer relationships	252
4.5	Customer loyalty measurement	256
4.5.1	Behavioral indicators	256
4.5.2	Cognitive indicators	257
4.6	Processes for relationship management	260
4.6.1	The analytical process	261
4.6.2	The strategic process	269
4.7	The operational process: Tools for relationship management	273
4.7.1	Omnichannel	274
4.7.2	Loyalty programs	278
4.7.3	Customer care tools	281
4.7.4	Personalization of the offer	286
4.7.5	Targeted communication	289
4.7.6	Partnership and experimentation	294
	Appendix D	296
D.1	The ABC analysis	296
D.2	CRM processes	299
D.3	Customer retention rate and average prospective longevity	303
5	Digital marketing	305
5.1	Introduction	305
5.1.1	Benefits of digital marketing	305
5.2	Analysis	306
5.2.1	Customer	306
5.2.2	Company	309
5.2.3	Competition	310
5.2.4	Context	312
5.3	Strategy	313
5.3.1	Segmentation	314
5.3.2	Targeting	317
5.3.3	Positioning	318
5.4	Tactics	320
5.4.1	Promotion	320
5.4.2	Product	326
5.4.3	Price	330
5.4.4	Place	331
	References	335